The Clinical Cases Uncovered (CCU) series from Wiley-Blackwell was designed to help medical students prepare for the wards by featuring realistic case presentations followed by queries and discussions. For those less familiar, the CCU series represents an alternative to the Case Files series which wasÂ Avery popular among American medical students preparing for shelf exams or rotations on the wards and clinics. There are almost 20 subjects covered in the Clinical Cases Uncovered series, including volumes dedicated to Subspecialties Mother & Tips such as cardiology, endocrinology, gastroenterology, hepatology and infectious diseases, among others. Each clinical case discussed in SÂ AÂ Rie CCU takes students through history, fanic examination, laboratory discoveries, diagnostic diagnostic investigations and a speech -and -sickness, with wide opportunities for questions and answers throughout. From the way. The authors are academic experts and, in the case of Hematology: CCU, St. James in Dublin and the "La Sapienza" University in Rome. Of the many Volumes of CCU, Hematology: CCU's text was first launched in the application form for iPhone/iPad in August 2011, with plans for other issues to be disclosed in application format in a future nearby. The developers launched a one -minute video on YouTube to announce this product. Read the jump below to see how the San Rie CCU translates into the iPhone. The Home Screen of Hematology: CCU App presents links to the basic science approach/patient, clinical cases, tests, research function, gloss, notes/markers, application purchases, additional information, and a guide to the user. In this review of the free parts of the application, we start with a brief member of the user guide, which explains what the purchase of the 22 additional cases (in the case of the basic sciences included) Provides access to all steps in each case, questions that accompany and the ability to create notes that â € œPique to 'a phrase or word specific. 1 of the 23 cases is free with the initial download of the application, but the other 22 cases are displayable via purchase in the application for $ 1.99 each, or $ 24.99 together. The section of basic sciences presents 36 slides by teaching students about the foundations of hematology. Individual slides can be starring, notes can be taken and text size can be changed. The usuals sail through the slides horizontally by the screen, but the navigation by each section is stillBitch. the various blades contain abundant figures, blades and diagrams, which can be expanded, enlarged, mock and contain appropriate captions. the "Apacrine section for the patient section includes 42 slides instructing the oraries in a complete clinical approach to a complaint of a hematology patient. then we move to the highlight of the ccu series, the cases themselves. here, while analyzing the free version of the application, let's take a look at the first case, "A tired woman of 35 years". the case. However, the oraries cross the remainder of the case through a format guided by relaxed questions and answers, divided into several stages. each case is impressively substantial and content-rich, with this sample case, for example, composed of 27 pages. Figures and slides for additional illustrations are included in abundance, each case also includes a review of cases and key points for abstract purposes. the key points are also incorporated throughout the case. each case also contains articles for additional reading and a glossary (of limited utility for most orary.) each case contains tests, which are divided into multiple-choice questions (mcq,) extended corresponding questions (of emq) and self-evaluation questions (saq) this variety of questions is a strength of the ccu series and facilitates an additional consolidation of learning with each case. mcq are presented in a format of awakening-responses. saq involve free response queries and offer brands as a guide to suggested answers. the quizzes section presents all the various questions once purchased. the search function facilitates the location of a specific case, glossary term u figure/table/diagram. price: hematology: clinical cases discovered apps with a case is free to download the app store, but the 22 additional cases can befrom inside the application separately separately $ 1.99 each or as a one buys together for $ 24.99. For a comparison question, the verse in hematology brochure: the discovered clinical cases costs $ 44.27 on Amazon.com. Tastes: cases of hematology rich in contain and deep of respected authors designed to reflect a attentive clinical approach to patients who MCQ, and EMQ, and SAQ accompany each wide range of subspecialties motto Likes: As in case files, this heavy text feature is not ideal for iPhone, because iPad contain only 23 cases (against 60 cases for case files: internal medicine) $S-Appeals A case comes free with the application; Uses should buy access to the other 22 cases that launch pages, going through the screen, as a surprisingly diffilled maneuver when using the application, making the navigation somewhat troubled: we encourage consideration The application format of the uncovered clinical cases, which carries more containing and is relatively similar ($ 25 vs $ 30), but contain fewer cases, such as an alternative or even supplement. © Rie of case files for medical students. For medical students who plan to buy the hematology brochure version: CCU for more than $ 40, we recommend buying the full application of the application for $ 25. Link link link
